Leala ended up writing several of those little books everyday and only turning in her favorites on Fridays. From there, Leala's writing developed from handwriting stories on wide ruled notebook paper to typing out her stories on her computer. She eventually started sharing her stories online through various platforms, gaining a following and inspiration from her readers. Her writing evolved, and she decided to pursue a career in publishing. After completing her education and gaining experience, Leala founded her own publishing company, focusing on young adult fiction. She continues to write and publish stories, often collaborating with other authors and sharing her success stories with aspiring writers. Through her own experiences and guidance, Leala aims to inspire and guide other writers towards their literary dreams.